

CSI Denver Chapter's own past president Mitch Denman, CDT has been in the construction industry for 15 years. As a certified and award-winning presenter for National Gypsum Company, he is one of the National Gypsum's chosen few tasked both with working with contractors in the field during construction, as well as educating design professionals with a selection of AIA accredited CEU presentations. Because he is involved in all stages of a project, he brings with him a wealth of knowledge about design, application, and substitution problems that arise during the construction process.

Mitch's goal is to educate everyone on the design and contracting teams so that problems are avoided from the beginning. He does this so he (and everyone else) doesn't have to work as hard fixing problems during construction. He still hasn't met this goal, which is why his golf game as a sales rep is downright embarrassing. Mitch is a member of CSI, USGBC, and Green Globe.
